

ABSTRACT

An integrated semiconductor device and method for its manufacturing are presented. A semiconductor element is provided having a perforation extending 5 along a central axis of the element, thereby defining a central channel inside said element. An inner surface of the perforation is processed via the central channel to define features of the semiconductor device to be manufactured.